this is US

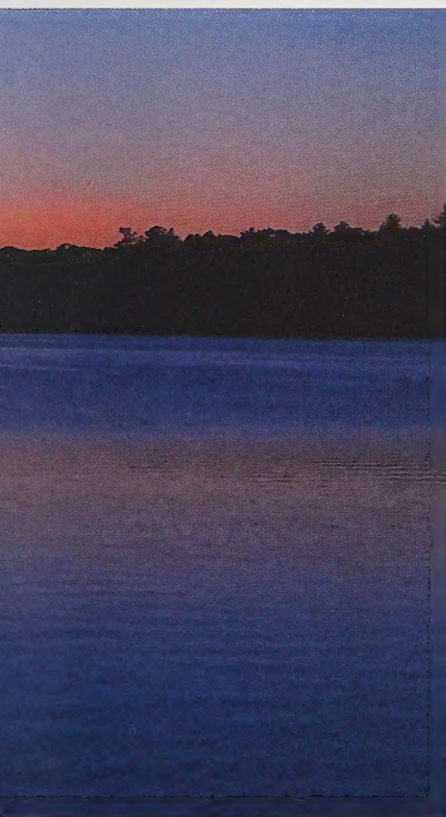

As a class with such diversity and spirit, it seemed no single word was fitting enough to describe us all. When the three words, this is us, were suggested, they seemed to resonate with the whole staff. The title suits everyone and unifies our class. The touching television program, This Is Us, portrays the twists and turns of life with all its highs and lows while the characters grow together. Our version portrays the same idea in a single book linking all of our stories; our high school careers were filled with unexpected turns that helped us develop into the people we are today. As we reach the finale of high school, we have this book to recall our journeys and remember this is us.

Sunset over Horn Pond

Junior year orange out at the Pep Rally

Since 1947, the yearbook has been titled Innitou. The book inscribes not only our class's history but also the history of our city. Innitou refers to one of our most notable landmarks, Horn Pond, a popular location for locals and travelers from other towns. The pond was where you walked your dog, rested on a bench to admire the sunset, hiked to view the Boston skyline and perhaps even the place that you rode a bike for the first time. Legend states that, long before the pond became a picturesque landmark, the Indian spirit Manitou viewed his reflection in the pond below. The natives at the time were the Massachusetts tribe and were living around Horn Pond Mountain. It was the tribe that declared the lake be named Lake Innitou meaning "Looking Place of the Great Spirit" in honor of Manitou. Today, however, most people simply refer to the body of water as Horn Pond. The name and legend of Innitou are commemorated by the Innitou Yearbook, in a similar way that our mark is remembered.

INNITOU

WELCOME to WOBURN

This is our home; we grew up here and we will grow from here. We spent half days walking from school to the center to grab a bite from The Restaurant or a coffee from Dunks. We had countless walks, bike rides, and runs around the pond under our belt. On weekends we played in pickup games at the high school fields or Weafer Park. Flag day was a night to ride carnival rides while watching fireworks, and Relay for Life was a touching cancer awareness walk – both occurred once a year at Library Field. We made Bill and Bob's stops, whether hanging out with friends on a Saturday night or if some fries were needed after a tough day of school. On a freezing November night, we stood bundled on the common to see shining lights turn on for the Festival on the Common .

All the sites around Woburn have become our own but they were not always ours. Before us came generations that shaped our community. The Woburn Public Library, where many of us participated in the summer reading challenge growing up, opened its doors in 1879. Since its opening it has been declared as a national historic landmark. We received funding for our first high school in 1852, over 50 years later a new high school was built in 1906. This high school was replaced with Woburn Memorial High School in 2006, the building that we spent four years studying in. The Tanner Pride we radiate and boast, came from those who worked in leather tanneries before our time. We have embraced this history and made it our own.

Amy Salvati, Lauren West and Julia Flood enjoy their ice cream cones with sprinkles on a sunny Saturday afternoon. Admittedly, this was Julia's first time visiting, but she loved it just as much as veteran. Amy has been coming here ever since her mother would walk her at the closing of each elementary school year. The three came together and made new memories during the capturing of this picture.

Manar Saeed, Deborah Michel and Pamela Pereira all look at the menu outside of Breakers. Manar was eyeing the extra thick frappe while Deborah and Pamela laughed at her choice.

"The cake batter ice cream slaps." - Manar Saeed

Bill and Bob's is truly a specialty of our city. Jaspreet Badwal shows a big smile for all of the memories she has here getting a sandwich after football games.

On a gloomy Saturday morning, Sabrina Lake holds up a handmade Cross Country car wash sign in the center. $5.00 for a car wash? What a steal.

Coach's Bridge is a universal symbol of hard work and aspiration among many student athletes. Two of which, Mohamed Mohuddin and Leka Berisha, reminisced about memories they had running across this very bridge during Cross Country races. Coach will forever be a part of this team's success.

Principal Callanan and Facilities Manager Ruggieri make sure the building is in tip top shape. Mrs. Childs works with her art students, Ms. McMahon and Mrs DiLuna cheer on the students at the pep rally, Ms Chase takes care of her wellness students, Mr. Parziale is ready for the school year, Ms. Heaton takes to the boards, administration team of Mr. Martin, Ms. Patrissi and Mr. Maguire greet everyone each morning.

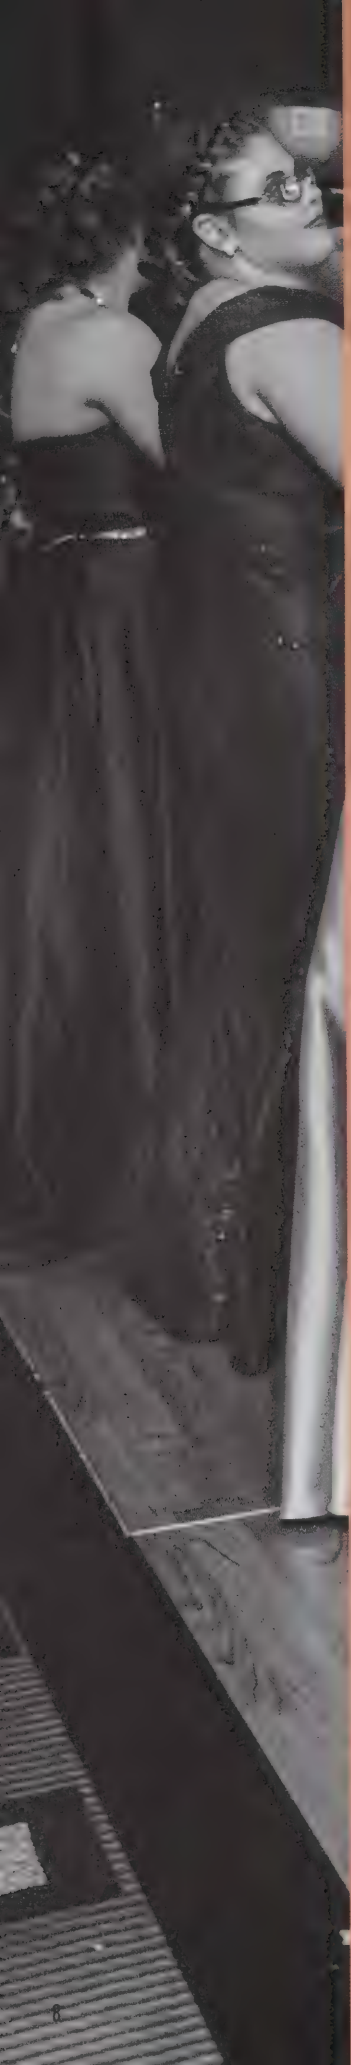

Dedication

This yearbook is dedicated to Mrs. Therese Taranto, our library media specialist. Mrs. Taranto has devoted over twenty years of book expertise to the staff and students of the Woburn Public School system. Her kind spirit and always willing to accommodate attitude are appreciated by those who visit the Harlow Library.

THAT WAS THE DAY

We have all found our way to become the graduating Class of 2019. We spent our elementary years walking into any of our eight elementary schools and sitting in classrooms decorated with the alphabet. We continued onto middle school where we eventually learned our way around and that neither school had a pool on the roof, despite what the older kids told us. After three years of middle school ended with a week of field trips or a trip to Washington D.C., we were thrown into the next four years of our lives. For the first time, we were all under the same roof.

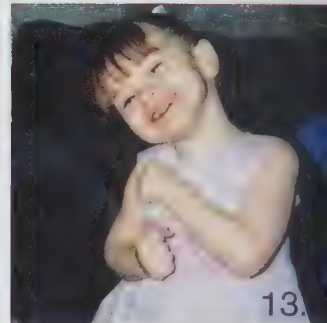

On the first day of freshman year, we timidly walked through the main doors to see the Tanner Pride seal on the floor and library balcony above – the same thing we would do for the next 719 days of high school. Sophomore year came with the wonders of APUSH and our first "date dance". Junior year hit next, and we were buried in more books than usual. We did, however, find time to take on the seniors in Powderpuff wearing neon orange dri-fit shirts and take over the senior café once the seniors left. We spent our final year making the most out of our time. We were studious. We were lively. We were growing.

This was us.

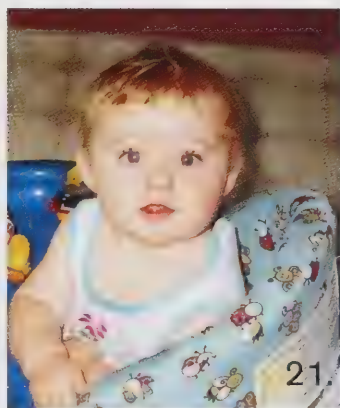

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

As we look back on our childhood years, we rely on pictures. The photos allow us to recount stories we cannot remember. Our appearance has changed since adolescence, yet our smiles are just as bright. We will always remember our youthful joy as years pass.

THOSE were the days...

Some of the strongest bonds we have were made throughout elementary and middle school. We traded silly bands at recess and competed in Four Square versus our classmates. Some of us met at the Fjord server of Club Penguin after school while others found Poptropica to be more their style.

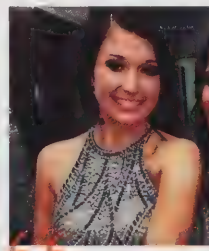

FAVORITE memories

"My favorite memory is running around Canobie in the pouring rain during our 8th grade field trip."
Ally Kenton

"Spending almost every weekend at the O'Brien rink with my cousins, I always had to get a cookie and a blue slushy."
Orlagh Skafas

"The drop off every Friday at the Joyce."
Taylor Doherty

"I got a session in 8th grade for 'throwing' an eraser... even though I didn't."
Stephanie Kirabo

"Mine is probably the DC trip at the Kennedy."
Alyssa Green

Shamrock kids dunked Principal Clark into the dunk tank at field day, the White had their annual brunch, and soon both schools would verse each other at the 5th Grade basketball match.

The Clapp kids strolled around nearby Horn Pond to raise money for charity. The Reeves paraded around the school in their Halloween costumes. On the Goodyear's playground, kids spun on the "spiny thing" until they flew off. The Altavesta was home to recess football games. The Linscott held their annual ice cream social. The Hurd performed a musical and the Wyman carried out presidential parodies in their Washington Idol. No matter which school we attended we have fond memories from our younger days.

Paul Garrity finds his locker on the first day at a new school. He lucked out and got a top locker, which, as many of us know, is a very good start to the year.

Stephen Kolodko runs for treasurer at our first class election. He was very well prepared, which got him the voters favor.

Though we were unable to go to our first Homecoming dance, we decided to be good sports during spirit week and participate to our fullest. We did, however, get our revenge at the pep rally when "Thanks for Hoco" chants from the freshmen section echoed around the gym.

Julia Taylor and Ashley Farfaras laugh as the camera man takes an action shot of them on the first day Biology class with Mrs. Glaser.

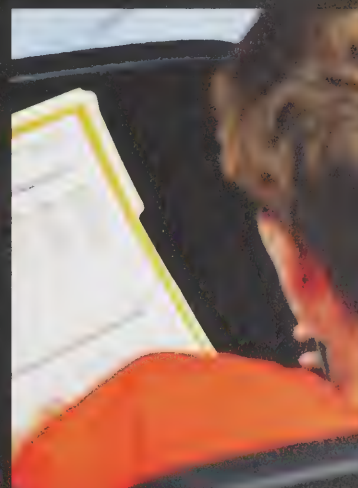

pe O'Brien looks ahead to three more successful years. Little did she know, at the end of those three years, she would look back at this picture and say, "Keep it, kin' buddy."

Anshel Isles livens up the dance floor during the Freshman Dance. This was the first dance of our high school careers, which now may seem like a distant memory.

We all remember the feeling of getting our first class schedule. After the initial anxiety of a new rigor, the excitement of a fresh start provides comfort for the new year.

Angelina Moore and Allison Mogauro look at their new class schedule. Sophia Blanco and Erin Gabriel excitedly wait for the Halloween parade to start so they can perform in front of the whole city. Hristomira Doncheva, Fatima Solis Alfaro and Brianna Garvey show off their stylish outfits and school supplies for the new year. Orlagh Skafas and Lorenzo Teixeira make their way to French class, unknowing of what to expect for the next few years. Gabriel De Oliveira and Luiz Freitas discuss their schedules between classes. Katrina Holland and Jennifer Brown have fun at the freshman dance. Alexis Akel is caught smiling at a friend during class. Stephanie Nguyen, Kaci Madden and Alyssa Ercolini dress for 'Merica Monday in an effort to secure the spirit week win for the Freshmen. Nathan Ntinunu patiently waits for something interesting to happen in class. Clara Walsh sits in her first class with nothing but smiles. Mary-Kate O'Riordan walks the new halls that she will be passing through everyday for the upcoming years. Alexandra Kontis is having a bad hair day in physics class, me too girl. Mikayla Loughlin stays cheesing in the cafeteria. Jason Maginnis, a few years and inches of hair ago, smiles with his fire tie. Nicky D walks the halls and stays hydrated at the same time, a man of many talents. Say hello to Mya Semidey and Giang Le! Ashley Ryan prepares for class, wishing she was in the Cape. Janae Williams sports her cute summer outfit in September. Isabelle Horton, Courtney Aucoin and Caitlin Poole slowly break out of their shells as they laugh before heading into orientation. Sean Donahoe scholarly poses in the auditorium. Justin Chung lines up to get his fresh schedule. Call him ranch, because Dresner be dressin' with Steven Perry. Abigail Marshall and Erin Heneghan express excited smiles in the school lobby. Shawn O'Connor and Fredley Petit Homme are not happy they have to be here this early in the morning. Sumeaya Abrar breaks the black shirt trend with her beautiful purple hijab next to Mohandira Eugene, Grace Amico and Tiffani Graham. Sydney Doyle and Aliyah Russo show enthusiasm for their education. Erin Frizzell and Eamon Bingel chill in class, it seems as though they could get used to this high school thing.

Our first year of our high school careers was spent adjusting to the new school. The building itself seemed confusing, despite the orange signs labeling which hallway was C wing and which was E. Everything seemed much larger and there was an abundance of unfamiliar faces. The first few days were overwhelming but we eventually got into the swing of things. Early on in the year we perused at the activities fair and signed up for too many clubs. Eventually we started going to meetings for clubs that we were actually interested in rather than just wanted free candy from. Many of us tried out for sports teams, either a sport we had lots of experience in or even a new sport that we were picking up. Whether we met people in Algebra or we were introduced during chorus, we found friends that we would spend the next four years with. The school even tried out Tanner Tunes once a week, for many students the music that blasted through the speakers as we walked from class to class was a mood lifter. Later in the year music was instead blasted at the freshman dance. The Mardi Gras themed dance was our first high school dance of many. We made our spirit week hallway homecoming themed. Our freshman year was an exciting preview for what the upcoming years would hold.

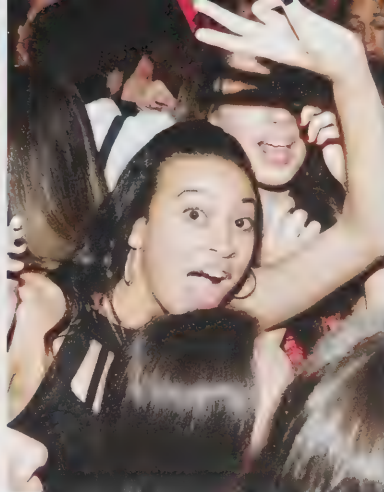

The freshmen dance was our first dance as homecoming tickets had sold out on us. We were dressed our best with masquerade masks in hand to match the Mardi Gras theme. We danced through a live performance by Sean Chebbo and laughed when the DJ played Masquerade from Rags. It was a cold March night that we will remember for the dances we shared and memories we made.

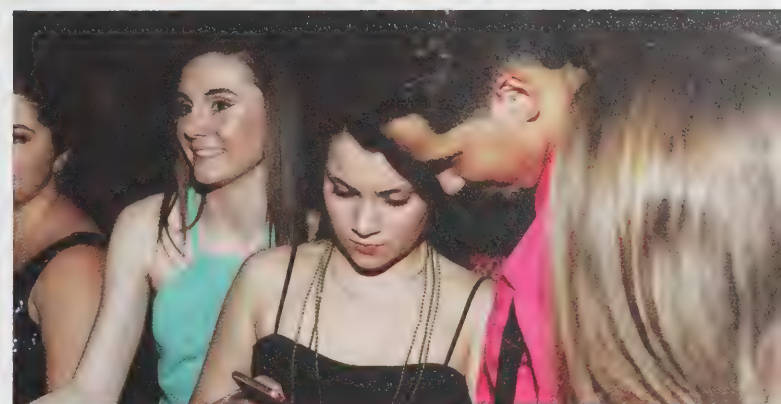

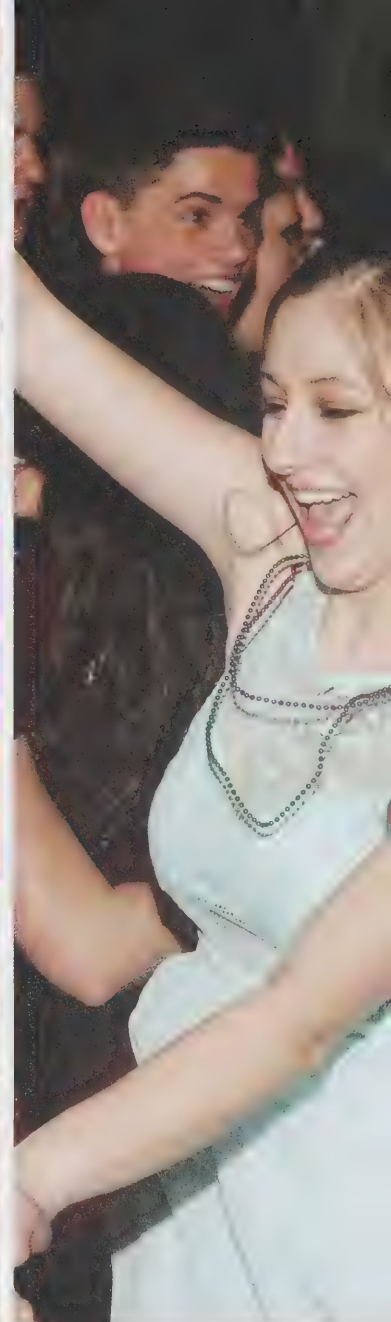

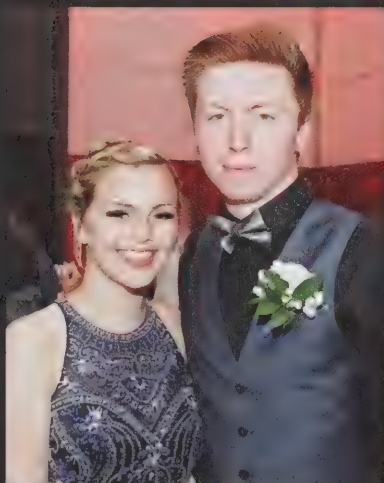

Jesse Stocker, Anna Guill, Alexa Palmisano and friends strike a pose in the midst of the dance floor. Jonathan Sanchez casually rests his elbow on Brendan Maye's shoulder, both playing to the theme with their beads. Mr. and Mrs. Mardi Gras, Steven Perry and Paige Coven, flaunt their crowns and shared trophy. Paul Garrity and Lexi Vallerand happily pose together, nice bow tie Master-Chef Paul Bryant Keatley, Renato Rosso, and Eamon Ringel deeply concentrate on who they are voting as Mr. and Mrs. Mardi Gras. Olivia Ansell and Megan Amico look excited for the Mardi Gras themed dance. Robert Concannon celebrates his first successfully planned dance as class president.

Brendan Maye and Matthew Donovan laugh at their friend's shenanigans before the start of school.

GLORY DAYS

Jenna Rankin and Phia Roldan pose happily in their favorite hallway. Kristopher Dacosta and J.J. Galindo believe they have the hang of this as they come into school for the first time no longer being "fresh men". Aaron Accardi stands in his favorite class of the day, fourth period band. Josie Hagopian and Alexandria Dalton chow down on the yummy school lunch. Sean Chebbo represents Boof Records as Dhruv Patel tries to duck out of the frame. Abigail Gamberdella and Amy Salvati exit the bus bright and early with fun summer outfits. Cole Mackey and Mike Pavone get distracted by the camera during a fun assembly. Erika Gangi throws up a peace sign, excited for the year ahead. Christian Jepson is full send hydrating and ready to take on the day. Watch out, Michael English is caught in a checkered button down. Sean Kindell politely poses in class, is that fake 'preme? Gabriela Arcos Rivera smiles brightly with her super cute satchel! Alexan Chaprazian speeds to his next class. Shahil Patel "had to do it to 'em" as he runs for a class officer position. Jonathan Sanchez and Gavin Sault comically pose, which is an honest reflection of their character. A group of friends find each other to sit with to make the assembly more fun. Sebastian Pino prepares for class. Erin Connor, Deborah Michel and Alynne Im stand outside the cafeteria after lunch. Emily Sullivan is happy with this years schedule as she sits in class. Maginnis, Skiguli and Pmo get hype. A class favorite, Mr. Deldon, eases us into another new year and describes how we all contribute to Tanner Pride. Anthony Rallo keeps the peace in the famed morning brew room. Brianna Garvey stays attentive during an assembly. Derek Syring, Justin Park and Andrew Flynn make sure they get into a picture for this very yearbook. Christopher Sweeney, William Carpenter and Matthew Spolidoro listen intently to a speaker in the auditorium. Jacob Richards stays hydrated during class, where is the H2O on that elements chart back there? Jake Herron seems very pleased in his class.

One of the best parts of sophomore year is no longer being the youngest. The school no longer seemed like a giant maze to us and we came into the year already having made new friends the previous year. For many of us this was the year we found our niche. We became more involved in the club we had grown to love and found ourselves a community. In the classroom we were more accustomed to the high school workload and able to manage our work better. Teachers like Mr. Doherty would tell us his life story between powerpoint slides and Mr. K would take us outside to the picnic tables to teach us about the nominative case to keep their subjects interesting. While walking through the D4 hallway, Mr. Kaufman could be heard speaking about chemistry while one wing over Mr. Laquidara worked with students in Geometry class. Outside of teachers classes, we had our first homecoming dance after we were unable to go during our freshman year. Only those who got their tickets early could go as tickets sold out quickly again. Later in the year, we had sophomore semi where girls wore colorful dresses and their dates matched on a warm spring evening. Outside of school it was a big year for sweet sixteens as the majority of us turned sixteen over the year. Besides extravagant parties, we spent time hanging out with our friends on the weekends. Our sophomore year was finished and suddenly we were halfway through our high school careers.

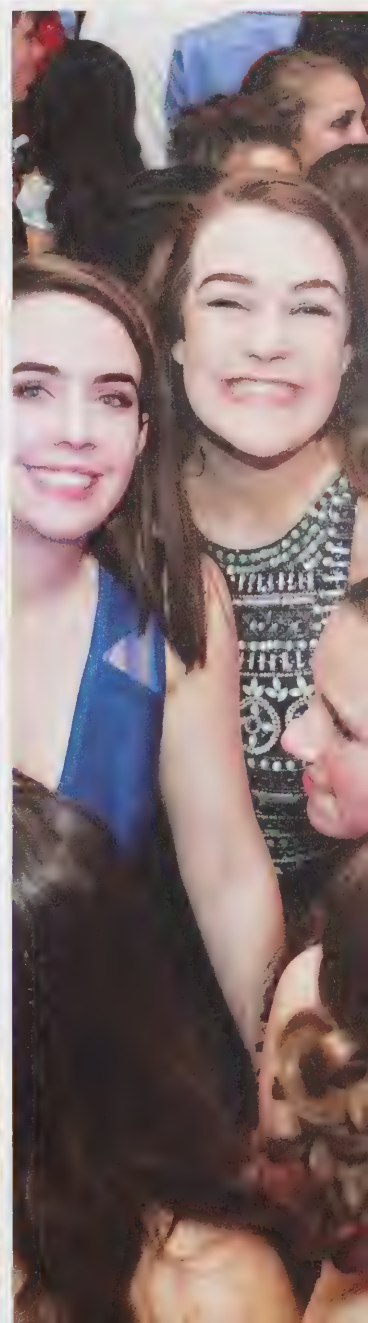

STRUT YOUR STUFF

Sophomore semi was our first "real" date dance. Before the actual dance there was a series of memorable promposals during sports practices and after classes. People put cheesy phrases on posters and bought candy to go along with their pun for the big question: "Will you go to semi with me?" We had a perfect spring day that made for beautiful pictures with blooming trees in the background. The night was spent dancing with our friends and dates until our feet hurt too much to continue.

Cathryn Power and Emma Turner hold up their yellow National Honor Society roses after a well deserved ceremony for their hard work during the school year.

Kimberly Thomas, Shaylin Doherty and Alaina Szwed look happy as can be at the prom.

Idsey O'Brien, Nicholas Albanese, and Ana Bowman and Caroline Spolidoro pose behind a picture frame during their summer themed Best Buddies event.

Ridge Byomuhangi appears shocked while looking on the computer in the library. This picture could sum up most of our reactions to the workload that was ahead of us.

TOGETHER

Kyle Bennett reviews his schedule with Mrs. Shaughnessy as Cortney Barretto sneaks into the background of the photo. Gareth Murphy-Bulpett gets a little distracted while Jillian Vecchia and Edic Herrera Farrell laugh. Miheret Asegid lays back on the last day, waiting for school to end and summer to begin. Emily Chhun takes a break from texting to pose for a picture. Spencer Wightman is ready for the day with his headphones in easy access. Matthews Silveira and Ben Saraceno share the love in class. Anthony Surette and Michael Steinle represent the duality of man during the school day. Alex Valme winds down from the day with music. John Rycroft and Angel Semidey seem excited to finally be back at school, returning from a long, hot summer. Meet Kothari, Casey Ivester and Jacob Zompanti try to contain their laughter in class. Emilio Arrondo steals the photo of him and Timmy Vo with his radiant laugh. Kortni Doby and Kemly Peron laugh their way into school. Emily Collins mocks Noah Flores in the back as him and Luis Piacentini contemplate class material. Aula Namboozee is excited to be a senior during move up day. Ryan Beattie and Peter Bellino both ignore the loud room with their music. Lina Batarseh wears a pretty floral shirt for the last day. Anthony Blazejowski sticks with the trend of red shirts as he writes a paper. Bailey Doherty catches the photographer as he snaps a picture of her walking into Junior year. Jared Simpson looks unimpressed with his class. Jesse Stocker really looks like that and Billy Heck tries to ignore him. Jason Rodriguez waves goodbye to Junior year as he anticipates all the fun the next year has to come. Lilian Nascimento Berbet and Hristomira Doncheva pose with their yellow roses from National Honor Society, wearing faces of accomplishment. Lexi Vallerand daydreams about Andy Leo. Leo Silva enjoys another day of Mr. Gangi's antics in a colorful classroom.

Junior year often gets the reputation for being the worst year of high school. Upperclassmen had always informed us that junior year was "rough" and "a force". Although the workload occasionally matched the descriptions from older students, the year was not nearly as awful as we feared and turned out to be rewarding in the end. We had a much larger assortment of classes to choose from including not having to take a traditional English class for once, we were offered AP Lang or Women in Lit as well. There were numerous options for science classes as well, we could learn chemistry, physics, or environmental science. The options often made our classes more interesting and gave us an opportunity to learn something different. However, the classes were challenging and came at the cost of carrying massive binders and losing some sleep. Outside of all our school work we made our first appearances on the turf for a powderpuff game. We had a successful year in our sports and clubs which ended in many of us earning spots as captains and club presidents for the upcoming senior year. Many of us had academic successes as well leading to our entrance in the National Honor Society. Teachers and guidance counselors alike pushed thoughts of college towards the end of the year. Plenty of us took the opportunity to attend the College Fair in Boston and speak with representatives from colleges. Lots of us got a better idea of the schools we were interested in by touring them at some point in the year. By the end of junior year we were tired but excited for what the next year would bring us. We could not help but look back and be proud of all we accomplished in what is considered the most difficult year of school.

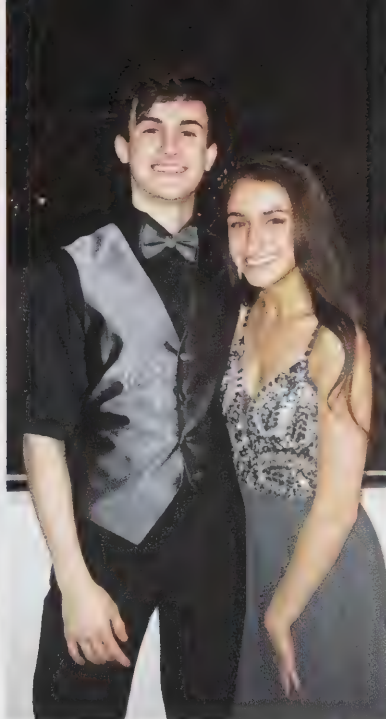

We had spent weeks preparing for our first dance that was not in the school. Hair appointments were booked months in advance and tables were decided weeks before. By the time junior prom arrived we were surprised with a snowy April night. Girls had to lift their long dresses to keep them out of the slushy puddles on the way into the dance. Once we were settled into the hall we ate the classy meal of chicken fingers and pizza.

When we hit the point that we were full, we took to the dance floor which housed countless speakers and strobe lights. Once the music stopped playing and the dance floor cleared it was time our first prom became a fond memory.

Nicholas Bordenca and Liana Cincotti look like a power couple at our prom. Sitting at their prom table, Hailey Sylva, Ryan Quisley, Taylor Doherty and Shawna Lynch are full from the delicious food and are ahead of the game by taking their shoes off before they dance. Elizabeth Duncan and Erin Connor show off their gorgeous dresses while waiting for the doors to the ballroom to open. Madelyn Ryan, Courtney Croftin and Julia Taylor all wear blue embellished prom dresses to make for a well coordinated photo. Malia Lawler and Sabrina Patricio went to the high school before prom to take pictures with everyone in the grade, and also some friends from other grades. Adam Dimasuro shows that chivalry is not dead as he puts the corsage onto Allison Maguire's wrist.

A large group of friends pose together, happy as can be. Peter Cole, Max Bradley, Renato Rosso and Tyler Parrish look like they are about to drop the hottest mixed tape of 2018. A parent gets an action shot of Nora Martyny, Hailey-Grace Newcomb and Cortney Barretto as they walk down the steps on their way to prom. Emily Collins, Jessie Guiendon, John Rycroft, David DiFrumolo, Kaci Madden, Cailey Scholtes, Nolan Doherty and Dyce Duckworth pause from dancing to take this classic picture. Madison Sherriff and Kevin Vasapolli pull off this sleek all black look as a couple. After all the time for hair and makeup, Fatima Solis Alfaro and Bailey Breen look beautiful, proving the time is worth it.

SENIOR YEAR

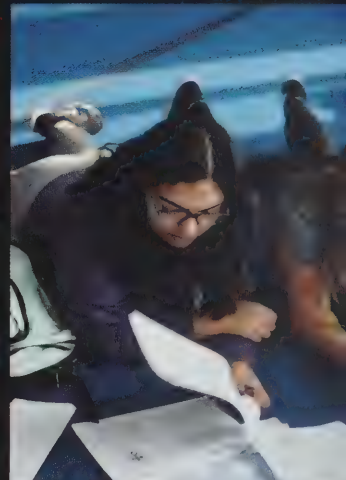

The first day of our senior year, Officer Fumicello blasted music from his police car and danced while he directed traffic. He was definitely more excited to start a new school year than we were.

Caroline Spolidoro walks towards the entrance wearing a fashionable back to school outfit. Props to her for not giving up like most of us.

Representing our class during the football game, Adam Dimauro makes sure the fan section is as rowdy as can be.

Cindy Yao and Gayathri Dayashankar are excited for AP Biology class with Mr. Qualey. Ashlee Young, Kayla DiCesare and Bryanna Jones pose happily before class. Camden Clark wears a fresh and fun blue shirt on a beautiful summer day. Kevin Doherty looks deep into the camera. Edic Herrera Farrell looks smug in his favorite class of the day. Cole Mackey shows that real men really do wear pink. Rachel Aleskivitch, Nicholas Barmash and Stephanie Buckley all have mixed feelings about the class that they are in. Matthew McNeil respects the schools no hat policy, even though his Bulls hat is really cool. Nicolas DePaula, Anthony Morales, Lorenzo Teixeira coordinate a symmetrical pose. Alex Chaprazian and Nolan Doherty enjoy their lesson. Kaylee Silvestri and Lauren Cooper have an ideal set up with gatorade and music, sounds like a dream. Samila Ribeiro DeHolanda is ready to learn science. It seems floral was "in" earlier Senior year seeing from Alex Dalton, Bailey Doherty, Izzy Horton and Bryanna Jones's outfits. Andrew Montezuma sits in computer apps. Matthew Lages checks his Soundcloud as J.J. Galindo and Derick Stone catch the camera. Andrew Millette eases into the new year. Katrina Holland and Adriana Rodriguez are glad to be in a class with each other to make it more enjoyable. Eduardo Hilario gives the day two thumbs up so far. Caroline Pahl studies for her next class where her effort shows through her high marks in school. Grace Amico and Fatima Caldwell make it to school successfully with their coffees in hand, avoiding the common casualty of dropping them in the parking lot as Autumn Murphy, Rishabh Patel and Dhruv Patel follow. All iced out, Evan Strandberg solutes the Tannahs. Séadna Lynch has colorful self-painted nails for the new year. Joseph McLaughlin likes that shirt. Shaylin Doherty and Sophia D'Amelio hangout in AE.

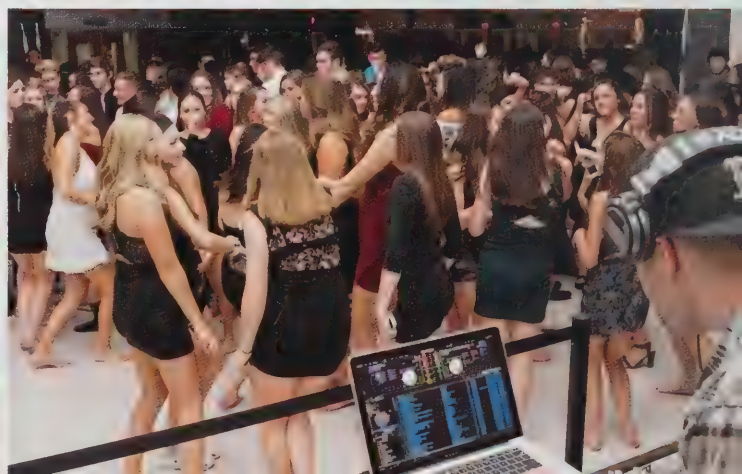

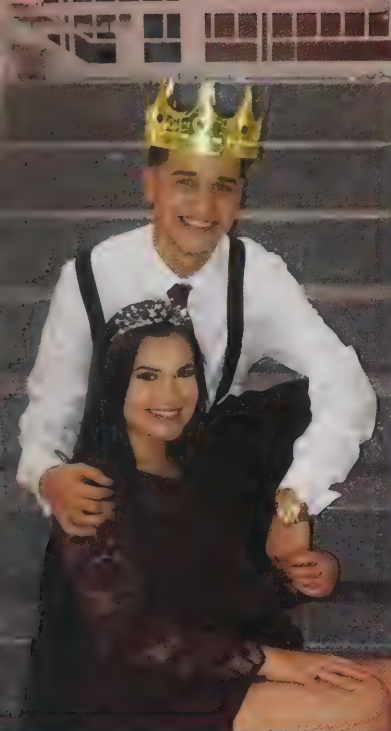

Since our first day sitting in the senior café and getting to wear our senior shirts we have embraced our role as seniors. After three years of high school, it was finally our time to enjoy the perks of senior year. The start of the year left no room for senior slide as grades had to be maintained for our college applications. We met with our patient guidance counselors and teachers to get assistance in filling out our applications. As the year passed by we heard back from dream schools and made decisions on where we would spend our next few years. Between the last push of school work we attended our final homecoming where we watched classmates run for homecoming king and queen. We cheered through the cold of the final thanksgiving game and took down the juniors in powderpuff on another freezing night. Besides homecoming we had two more chances to show off our dance moves at the holiday dance and senior prom. For most of us, the holiday dance would be the final time we danced barefoot in the foyer while senior prom was our final chance to kick off our shoes with our class. Between all our dancing and cheering we did still attend classes. Mr. Gangi taught us some final life lessons in English and Ms. Oura's puppets taught us about our lungs. We still found room for some end of the year shenanigans between an intense game of senior assassin and a senior prank. Eventually, we reached the milestone of walking across the stage and receiving our diplomas. Our whole school careers were spent dreaming of this moment. After our diplomas were in our hands we spent the summer attending graduation parties and celebrating with our friends. The end of our senior year marked a new chapter for the rest of our lives.

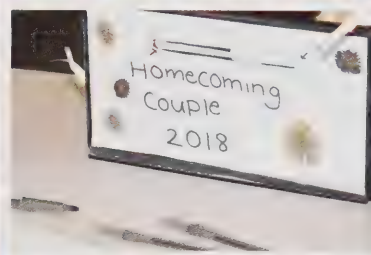

For some of us this was our third homecoming dance as freshman year tickets sold out, limiting us to three homecomings over four years, which we may have never gotten over. We made the best of the school foyer on the November night. This year it was our turn to be on the homecoming king and queen ballot. We casted our votes having known the candidates for at least four years. The night was more than an election, however, we spent the night dancing. We belted lyrics to Mo Bamba with our friends and danced until we tired. Once it was time to leave, we gathered our belongings and the dance floor reverted back to a school foyer.

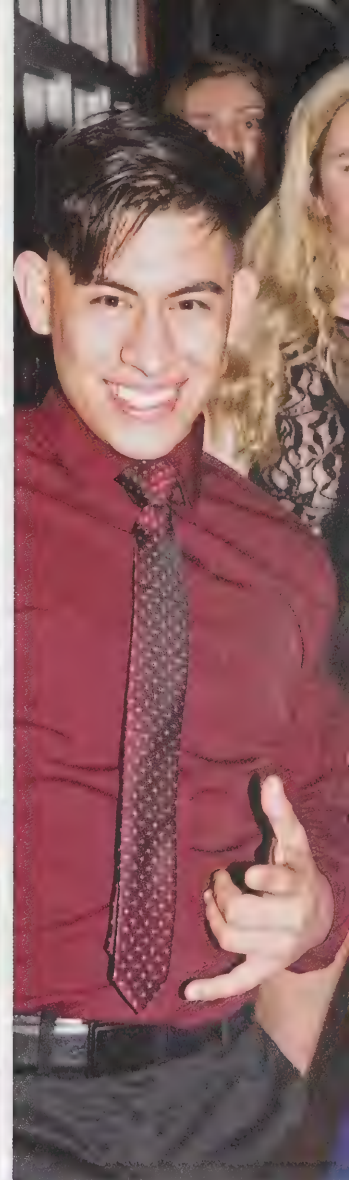

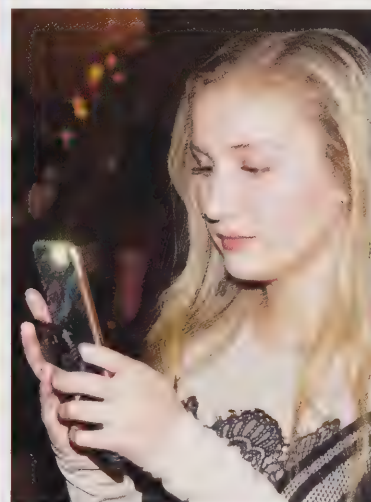

Allison Kenton, Anna Guillli, Meghan Nicolas, Madison Sherriff and Olivia McDermottroe take a break from dancing to serve looks. Stephanie Buckley, Amelia Rycroft, Caitlin Poole, Emily Collins, Jillian Vecchia and Kelly Nett take the annual pre-dance photo. He's no DJ Dan, but he will do. Pedro Rey and Hayley McGahan our King and Queen; That pose is fooling no one Pedro, we see that watch. Sophia Santos is stuck on camera duty for her friends. Taylor Doherty, Alexa Palmisano and Hailey Sylvia pose under the lights. Homecoming would not be the same without the people who make you feel most at home, and luckily Julia Taylor, Courtney Cronin, Madelyn Ryan, Lindsey O'Brien, Paige Coven, Angelina Moore, Mary-Kate O'Riordan and Allison Mogauro found those friends.

Jonathan Castro Dubon dressed to impress at homecoming! Ashley Farfaras and Katherine Furxhi dance together at one last hoco dance. Alexa Palmisano and Robert Concannon pose as a couple. Samila Ribeiro DeHolanda smiles in her fun velvet dress. Amelia Rycroft and Chris Chalmers talk with Sean Gately. Orlagh Skafas, Jaspreet Badwal and Erin Gabriel smile moments before going sicko mode on the dance floor. Christian Parker and Kathleen Aptt pose in front of the beautiful wall decoration.

CAN'T HIDE OUR PRIDE

The Pep Rally was a time to show our school spirit. Every year before Thanksgiving the entire school packed into the stands of the gym. Senior year was our chance to show our pride by wearing white, black, and orange. The colors were a combination of what we wore freshman, sophomore, and junior year respectively. The rally was built up by a spirit week where we threw it back on a Thursday and lounged in our pajamas on Friday. The week all culminated to the day of the rally. We laughed at the joint performance from the cheer and football teams and witnessed our teachers get pied. After a big win against the underclassmen and the teachers in a game of tug of war we battled all the other grades in lip sync performances. Put aside all the crazy performances we had gathered to show our support for our school in the end.

FAVORITE RALLY MOMENTS

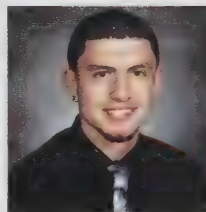

"The dance that the cheerleaders and football players did."
- Bruce MacNeil

"Making shirts in our grades colors and getting all dressed up."
- Stephanie Buckley

"Getting ready with all my friends the morning of."
- Emily Grace

"The nights of practice leading to the cheerleading/football performance."
- Nick Newman

"Going out to eat at Bickford's or the Nines."
- Pat Moore

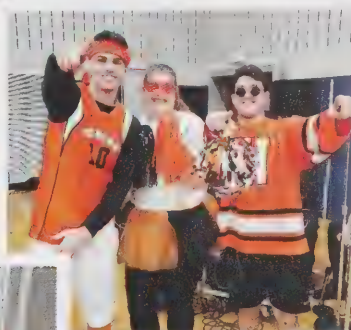

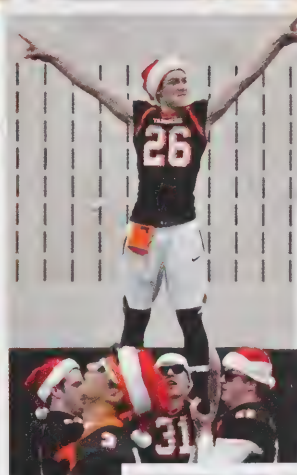

"Mr. Gill and Mr. Lapon's Turkey Toss."
- Jack Harkins

Hailey Sylvia's highlight is absolutely popping in compliment to Sophia Santos's pompom. Tyliah Maldonado-Andre has her eyes on the prize while putting a helping hand into winning the tug of war contest against the Juniors.

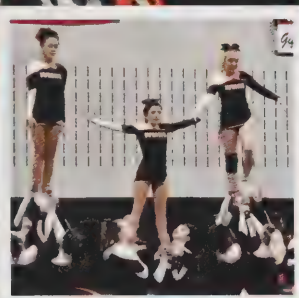

You can do it, A-Money, put your back into it! Dyce Duckworth flexes as Santa's elves support his footwork.

Rally Masters Max Bradley, Alex Kontis and Christian Jepson know whats up. Kimberly Thomas and Bailey Doherty dress with pep.

Kimberly Thomas and Alexa Ryan stand in a powerful pose as the entire gym cheered them on.

The cheer team get into position as Alyssa Ciasullo works as a stable base. Emma Turner has no cares in the world as she makes it rain into the fan sections. Abigail Marshall ducks away from a hug after she pied her father... in the face!

Let's play a game called count the orange tights. I got 8, how about you?

The Holiday Dance was the chance for us to dance in the school one final time. We all got decked out in red, green, blue, and gold for the December night. Students could be seen wearing unusual dance attire like ties with Christmas scenes or a gift wrap bow in place of a corsage. While the DJ played Post Malone and Ariana Grande we swamped the dance floor to show off our moves. As the night closed we left our last dance in the foyer to grab a bite or head home.

Patrick Herbert and his girlfriend gather at a friend's house before the dance to get ready. Daniel Sullivan and Sean Kindell pull off the all black outfit with festive ties. A group of friends hype each other up on the dance floor. Angela Garrity and Gordan MacNevin went all out, if only there was a best dressed award. Kayla Cramer poses with her friend's date, Pedro Rey, due to the unfortunate timing of her own date. A group of girls get ready to party one last time in the school lobby. Bethany Cioni is taking a break from dancing and is waiting to hear her favorite song before going back out. Lindsey O'Brien, Paige Coven and Mary-Kate O'Riordan closely pose. Justin Gelvez, Adam Dimauro, Fredley Petit Homme and Julian Steed get together to talk in the cafe.

THE GAME PLAN

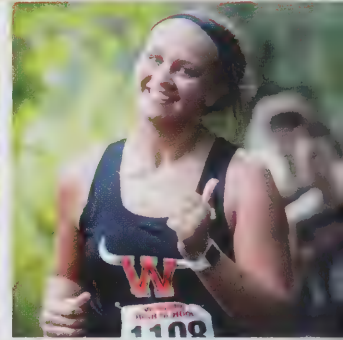

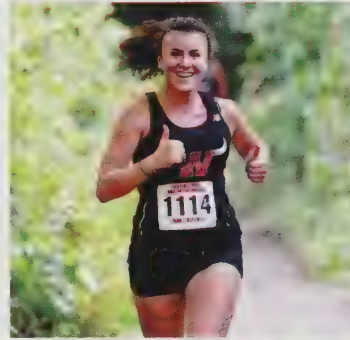

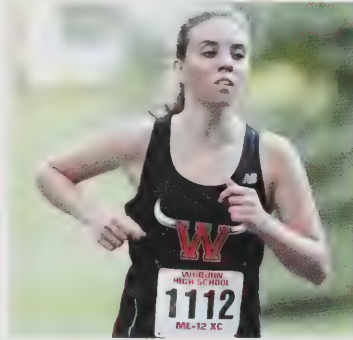

Lexi Palmisano

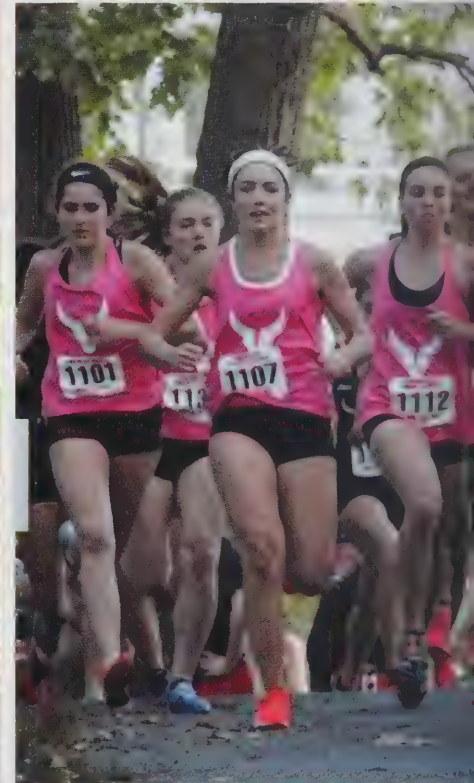

We put on our jerseys and took to the field, ice, court, pool and track. We stood crowded in the stands dressed in black from head to toe for blackouts or even participated in a much bolder orangeout. We as a class have proved our Tanner Pride by wearing our black and orange sports clothes wherever we go. We showed up on Friday nights to football games even when it was freezing and our fingers would go numb. We yelled back to our cheerleaders as they directed us to spell out W-O-B-U-R-N. We wore layers as we screamed in the Ned and even the Garden. We taunted the other team yelling "We can't hear you". We, not only cheered from the sidelines, but we were also the players contributing to the winning teams. We listened to pep talks and we gave pep talks. We fundraised with car washes in the center and bake sales in the cafeteria. We celebrated by proclaiming that we own Winn Street or that we #BeatLex. We decorated our locker rooms with black and orange streamers on senior night. We showed off that it was game day by wearing our jerseys to school. We made our way from the Freshmen team to JV to Varsity by proving ourselves worthy. We are hardworking. We are competitive. We are driven. This is us.

"My favorite thing about being on the tennis team is how close we all are."
- Amy Skellern

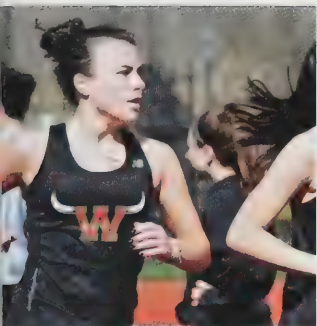

FAVORITE MEMORY

Tennis has more than a team aspect among all the athletes; it could be considered a family. Those who are talented enough to make it through tryouts are immediately rewarded for their hard work and embraced by the other athletes on the team. Since the teams are so small, they get to know each other well through practices and matches. From pasta parties to pranks, Chipotle to laser tag; the teams really enjoy and respect each other as people. Though there were some rough seasons, the atmosphere is what makes the sport worth the hard work. The boys and girls teams both supported each other at matches and combined for activities such as pasta parties.

Lauren Wells and Senior Class

THIS IS US

We spent our years making friends, playing sports, joining clubs, and studying. On Fridays, we walked from class to class as Tanner Tunes blared throughout the building. We practiced in Connolly Stadium and competed at the Boys and Girls Club. In the auditorium, we sang and acted, preparing for the big show in April. We studied on the floor in front of our lockers until Mr. Maguire announced "It's 7:25; you should be on your way to your first period class." We rehearsed in the band room while others painted down the hall in D1. We would not be the same class if it was not for all the teachers we had throughout all of school. Teachers of every subject taught us valuable lessons whether it be Ms. McMahon teaching us English and how to be a "student of the universe" or Mr. Bridgeo covering American history by bringing it to life or learning math in the collaborative environment that is Mr Skeffington's classroom. We were encouraged and pushed to become the greatest versions of ourselves by our teachers. We are inspired. We are diligent. We are talented. This is us.

We Remember...

MAKAYLA GOGLIA

IN MEMORY of Ronald "Rocky" Nelson

Rocky's love was football and teaching kids. He was able to put them together as a physical education teacher and as an assistant football/head coach for over forty seven years.

Rocky started in 1986 as a defensive coordinator for Woburn High School, his alma mater. He then took over as the head coach after 16 years as coordinator. Rocky retired in 2016 after the Thanksgiving game win over Winchester.

As head coach, he won 208 games and a Super Bowl in 2005 and making four Super Bowl appearances. Rocky was inducted into the Massachusetts High School Football Hall of Fame in 2016.

Around the World

One of the greatest strengths of our class is its diversity.

We have students from almost every continent in our grade. Some of us have traveled all the way from other countries to become a part of Woburn's Class of 2019. We come from numerous different nations, all of which are represented in the flags that hang above our heads in the cafeteria. Our different backgrounds is something that we take pride in as a class.

ART AND DESIGN

The arts program in school helps foster the creativity of students.

Classes have furthered the skills of those of us aspiring for a career as an artist and those looking for a hobby alike. The most popular classes included ceramics where we learned how to sculpt clay and art foundations where we had an introduction to a variety of mediums. Another type of art that students partake in is design classes. Many of us learned how to alter an image in Photoshop or how to create an original design in graphic design.

The life long skills we acquired in these classes will allow us to always appreciate the importance of art in our lives.

Hailey Park and Erin Frizzell display their beautiful artwork. Eamon Bingel paints an action packed piece, perhaps for his upcoming comic. Erin Connor works diligently on a drawing with many fine details.

Every great artist has a great teacher, and for Christian Parker, that teacher is Mrs. Childs. Mikayla Loughlin, Jake Herron, Jesse Stocker and Lauren West work on their ceramic sculptures. Sabrina Patrizio holds up a self portrait she worked very hard on. Peter Bellino uses his computer graphic skills to design the winning poster for the Grease Musical.

David Difrumolo landed his first big role as Skuttle from The Little Mermaid. Ms. Smith directs the upcoming musical of 2019, Grease. Our very own seniors were influential seagulls in The Little Mermaid. Those very seagulls got together with the head honcho, Skuttle, to take a picture. David Difrumolo, Christian Parker and Colin Breslin show off their amazing makeup effects as characters from The Addams Family. Lidia Capelo, Alex Kontis, Megan Amico and Jesse Siverhus get ready to perform. Hayley McGahan and Gayathri Dayashankar dance to the singing of Mary Poppins. Uncle Fester has such a way with words, Megan Hemenway agrees. Kayla Cramer gets into her scene.

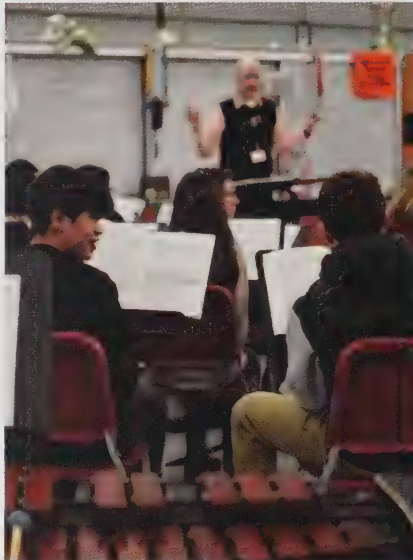

Through our past four years, we have participated in all four musicals. The two night event had hours and hours of practice leading up to the big performances. After school the cast would practice dances, songs, and lines. They wore the perfect costumes and perfected their makeup to add to their performances. As freshman, we played characters from The Little Mermaid. As sophomores, we were the cast of Mary Poppins while during junior year we were members of the Addams Family. By the time it was our senior year we earned spots as the stars of Grease. Our roles did not come without a series of auditions and hard work learning lines. In the end we were able to take to the stage and perform entertaining musicals.

THE MUSICAL

always on PITCH

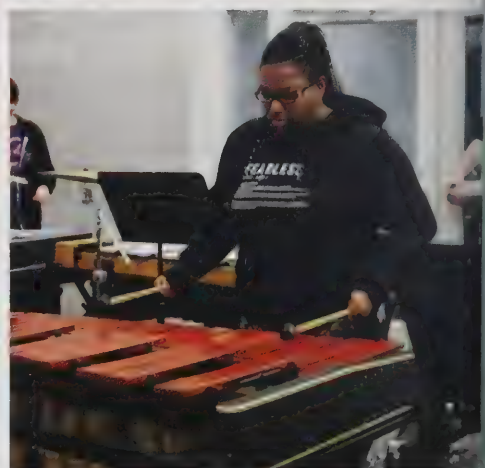

Many of us who had the skill of playing an instrument joined the band in high school. The passion that the musicians have was put towards the group to create music. Members of the band picked up their instruments to perform at pep rallies, football games, concerts, and parades. They have class together every day which allows them to not only perfect their music but also form a bond. The group works tirelessly in order to create entertaining performances for the school and the community.

Jenna Rankin rocks the striped suspenders as she rocks the crowd with her flute playing.

Karynn Dalexis performs under the Friday night lights with the band. Patrick Lee and Noah Flores get distracted by one of Mr. Tully's jokes during rehearsal. Josie Hagopian gets her tenor drum tuned by instructor Mike Reed before a long cold parade. Kyle Ortolaza, Dad and Deborah Michel blow the crowd away during the pep rally. The jazz band works hard for their next performance. Cindy Yao shows off her talent as she uses two mallets per hand on the vibraphone. Karynn Dalexis fearlessly tries a new instrument out for Winter Percussion.

Aaron Accardi puts the work in to perfect his section of sheet music. A group of chorus girls pose with their favorite teacher during the annual music banquet. Mr. Gilbertie instructs the enthusiastic chorus kids. Acapella gathers for their annual performance at the lighting on the common. Josie Hagopian holds a lot of talent in a little body; she shows that no matter who you are, you can attain anything you put your mind to. Hailey-Grace Newcomb, Nicole Nelson, Seadna Lynch and Phia Roldan listen to their instructors directions for the song for their concert.

Nicole Nelson puts her talents to the test as she sings on stage, a talent she has had since she was very young.

The chorus, just like the band, meets everyday so they can work on their performances. These performances occur at different events throughout the year including concerts and graduations. Students must audition with Mr. Gilbertie to earn their spot in Acapella. Once they have their spot they must continue to work hard at their talent. They do singing exercises and memorize lyrics to build up to their performances. By the time the group is ready they are able to sing as a unified group and impress their audience.

JOIN THE CLUB

Through our high school careers, we became invested in clubs, giving us experiences we would not have gotten without Woburn High. We stepped into the statehouse and grilled witnesses. We took our pen to the paper and wrote captivating articles for the Bullseye. We lifted our instruments to play Black and Orange. We stayed after school creating artwork to decorate hallways. We performed routines to Fergalicious during halftime. We hosted events and dedicated our time to helping the community. We strutted onto the stage and became the Addams family. We stomped in the gym to create our own beat during the pep rally. We tutored other students and gifted teachers for Teacher Appreciation Week. We hung out with our buddies celebrating friendship and competed in cornhole with them. We are passionate. We are committed. We are involved. This is us.

Courtney Barrese and Nura Martiny are happy as can be at a Best Buddies event for the state.

The Anime Club spends time together watching the Japanese style of animation. Besides watching the films, they read manga, a type of graphic novel native to Japan. The group takes trips to anime events to celebrate the Japanese animation.

Each month the Art Club meets to do a different project. They work with various materials to create their masterpieces. Their work is often displayed around the school for other students to admire.

Best Buddies hosts a series of events throughout the year focused on having fun and forming friendships. Members are paired up with a buddy and they develop a strong friendship over the course of the year. Club wide events like the Halloween party and movie night allow for program bonding. Our high school program interacts with neighboring programs as well to form a large community.

The Botany Club is one of the newest clubs offered in school. Founded during the 2018-2019 academic year students in this club make the school greener. These young gardeners use their expertise to introduce more plants into the school. Students made use of the leftover poinsettias, from a biology class, by giving the flowers to teachers. They took their green thumbs outside to clear out the raised beds in the courtyard. The group hopes to plant bulbs in the beds in order to add beauty to the school.

In the library after school, you can find students cradling their books. There is a high chance that these students are a part of the Book Club. The club consists of a group of students that have an appreciation for literature that they wish to share. These avid readers have meetings in the library to discuss the books they have read.

In Debate students research topics so they are able to form strong arguments. During their meetings students have competitive debates which allow students to improve their debate and speaking skills. The club has a goal to allow students a space to discuss topics that they may not get the opportunity to discuss elsewhere.

Members of DECA participate in a national program. DECA is an organization that has chapters all over the United States. The program prepares students for the business world in areas such as marketing, finance, hospitality, and management. Club members attend competitions and conferences throughout the year.

Students that want to be involved in theater productions join the Drama Club. The students participate in DramaFest, which is a competition that the whole state partakes in. Those that perform, help with costumes and makeup, and control the technology behind a play all work together to create one large production.

Embrace focuses on racially based issues faced not only in our community but also on a world wide scale. The club promotes a diverse community. They hope to bring awareness to the racial issues that they have noticed and discussed.

The Fishing Club is a group of students who have meetings and discuss fishing trips. At their meetings they also plan trips to the local ponds. The group even raffled off a live goldfish.

Students that are Freshmen Mentors work with freshmen to help them adjust to high school. The group meets with freshmen during advisory and does activities with them. The mentors have training throughout the year so they can properly run the activities with the freshmen.

Amy Salvati scales the slippery rocks to meet friends at the top of the trail.

Members of the Green Team keep our school more green. They help with recycling by collecting all the recycling bins from every classroom. The team wants to decrease the impact of global warming so they take action. They keep students informed by making entertaining videos on what can and what can not be recycled. Besides doing the recycling they meet to discuss ideas on how to make the school greener.

The Hiking Club is a group of students that get together to share their appreciation for hiking. They go on hikes together through local trails. They meet to plan out their hikes and then they go on their hikes after school or during the weekend. Their trips, like their trip to Lynn Woods, are a group of friends spending their day out in nature.

Interact is a group of students that participate in the service organization. The Friday before February vacation they put on the Dating Game, a comical event focusing on the romance of seniors. The Dating Game is a fundraiser which gives money to scholarships. The students in the club are a part of the junior division of Rotary. The club does other service events in partnership with the Rotary.

Intrepid Keystone is based out of the Boys and Girls Club of Woburn. The program is about leadership and service in the community. The members must work with others on their projects to help them gain more skills.

Corey Casey offers yummy snacks for a Key Club blood drive.

Every Friday after school the K-Pop Club can be found in a meeting. They discuss and watch K-Pop music videos. K-Pop is a genre of music that originated in South Korea but has spread all over the world. They also talk about the Korean culture as understanding the culture allows listeners to make more sense of the music. The group is able to form a bond over the year through their similar appreciations for the music genre.

The Key Club focuses its service programs during the year. The group is in association with the Kiwanis Club of Woburn. They host on the blood drive every year, which gives students and staff the opportunity to donate their blood. The group can be found being involved around the community any time of year from an October morning Halloween Parade or a warm June night during Flag Day. They host a volleyball and basketball tournament in the school as well. The club uses the money they earn in their fundraisers to donate to local and statewide charities.

LEARN is made up of a core committee and general members who look to raise awareness about impaired driving. The club wants everyone to be able to be safe on the roads. The students and supporters wear blue bracelets to remind themselves of safe driving. LEARN hosts an assembly, pledge, and freshmen presentation to bring awareness to the issue of impaired driving.

Members of Leo Club are associated with the Lions Club of Woburn to participate in service projects. Their work around the school includes the talent show, which raises money and highlights the talents of students. The money the club raises goes to causes as they are a service organization. They also do work in the community like volunteering at the Halloween Parade or at Leo Club events.

National Honor Society

The Math Team is group of students that have an appreciation for math. The group is open to anyone but the top ten students on the team are selected to compete at math meets. At their meets students challenge students from other schools. The teams compete until someone is victorious.

Students in grades eleven through twelve are members of the National Art Honor Society. The members are nominated to be in the society based on their work. The group works to improve their art skills and bring awareness of the art programs to the rest of the school.

If students meet the requirements they are able to apply to become members of the National Honor Society. The group focuses on their principals of scholarship, leadership, character, and service. They offer tutoring in the library after school and do a food drive in the fall to help the local community.

Madison Sherriff and Sophia Sheldon spread their sunshine as they promote their club.

The goal of Spectrum is to spread awareness for the LGBTQ community. The club is a safe haven for those who identify within the community. Students are able to talk to others that have had similar experiences. They also participate in the Day of Silence, a day where students do not talk for an entire day to spread awareness of those that are bullied for being LGBTQ. They also do informational bake sales and other fundraisers throughout the year.

Members of Spreading Sunshine want to give joy to those in the community that need it most. They make decorations for those in rehabilitation facilities to make patients feel more at home. During Halloween they collected barely used costumes to donate to children that can not afford them. The group wants to make the community happier so they volunteer their time.

Brianna Garvey leaves no room for error in her step routine.

The Step Team performs step routines for the school and community at multiple events. Step is a style of dance where the performers make a rhythm with their body through stomps and taps. The team has a practice after school where they work hard to perfect their routines. One of their biggest performances of the year is in front of the whole school at the pep rally.

The Student Council works with administration to run student activities. The group hopes to be the voice of the student body. The biggest events they run around school are class elections and Spirit Week. They run the powderpuff game and the Halloween costume contest as well.

Translators/Interpreters Club

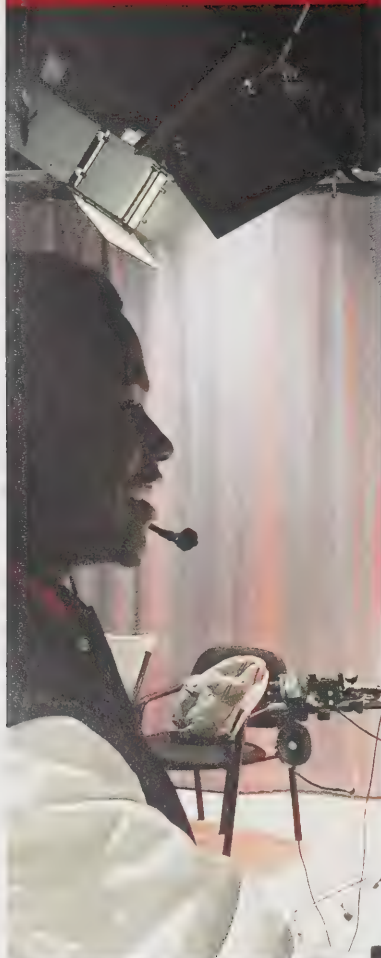

We have all witnessed the tech crew members running around the gym trying to get the best angles to capture during the pep rally, but from their perspective it all makes sense.

Members of the Tabletop Gaming Club are fanatic of board games. They do not just play traditional board games like Monopoly or Clue but they try to play newer games as well. Some favorites include Settlers of Catan, Castle Panic, and Smallworld. Players enjoy mastering the strategy in the games and meeting fellow tabletop gaming fans.

The Technology Crew operates the technology in the school for events. They work in the soundbox, in the auditorium, during any school event. They must control lighting and sound so that anything happening in the auditorium can run smoothly. The group also captures video footage of games and performances that occur around school.

The Translators/ Interpreters Club is a group of students that is fluent in multiple languages. These students are able to translate from one language to another. They use their language skills to do translations and community work.

Daniel Kitiwba shows the love for videography as he helps the media center with the morning announcements.

The UNICEF club at school works as a chapter of the international UNICEF program. They have the same mission of assisting in humanitarian efforts and they fundraise money for those in need by having raffles and selling Christmas pretzels.

Everyday during second period students tune into the morning announcements. The team behind it, the WPMC Morning Announcements Team, produce and broadcast the announcements. Students work behind the scenes on lighting, sounds, and graphics while others sit in front of the monitor and read out the days announcements. The announcements tell students important information like the lunch order, what day it is, and what is happening around school.

Students who participate in Youth and Government attend statewide conferences to participate in a mock government. The students, or delegates, participate in the executive, legislative, or judicial branch of the state government. The legislators must try to pass a bill through a committee then through the house or senate. Those in judicial either work alongside the attorney general to check the constitutionality of bills or participate in a mock trial case.

Students in Youth Council work with the Boys and Girls Club to do community service projects. They hold events for kids like crafts and trivia and involve themselves in service around the community like Relay for Life and the Dwelling Place.

Behind the Scenes Room D129

THEME:

We started as a yearbook staff in March when we applied and interviewed to be part of the team. Once we were hired, our first task as a team was to design the cover and choose a theme that we felt would fit our class. We spent a morning at The Restaurant where we discussed many creative ideas. The following week, we worked with Herff Jones Publishing Rep. and artist Susan Happel and Ashley Joiner to design the cover.

TRAINING:

On the day before the school year started, we came into the yearbook room to be trained on the software with Susan. Right from the first day of school we worked on deadline one. This included the first few pages of the book, dance pages, dividers, and spring sports.

CONVENTION:

In the middle of this deadline, we traveled to the National High School Journalism Conference in Chicago to attend design, writing and publishing sessions along with meeting with a Herff Jones Publishing consultant to discuss our design pages. We also spoke with other students about their publications. The invaluable skills we learned allowed us to come back home and create stronger designs.

FINAL DEADLINES

In December, deadline one was submitted and we still had deadline two to complete, which contained classroom pages, senior profiles, and fall sports. Before February vacation we sent our final pages in to the publisher. This deadline three included clubs, winter sports, and the final few pages. At the end, we had designed 176 pages. All of our hard work had paid off to create an impressive book that was revealed during the Class Day - Yearbook Ceremony in May.

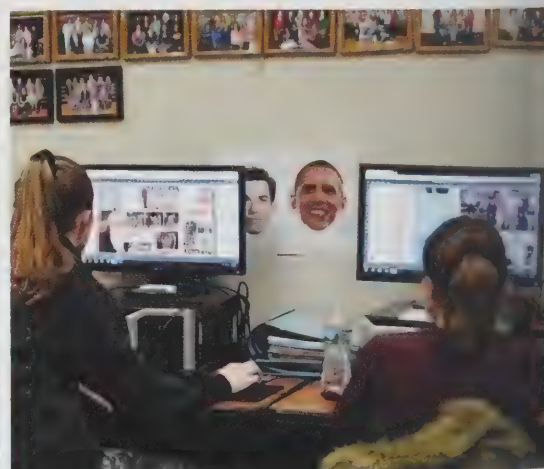

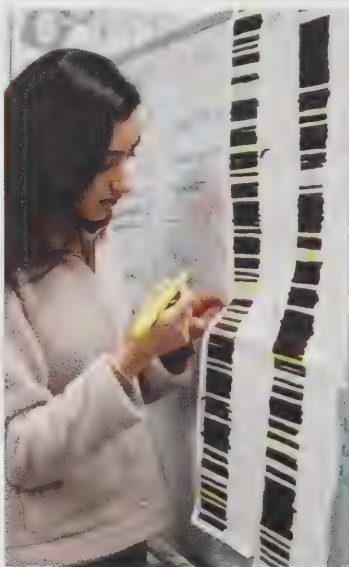

Susan Happel (left), our Herff Jones Rep, guided us through the whole yearbook experience, teaching us how to use the new software and helping us out in times of need. Ashley Joiner (right) designed the cover while consulting with us during a Google Hangouts session.

On the first day of senior year, the staff poses with peace signs for a silly photo, excited to start the grind to create a book unique to the Class of 2011.

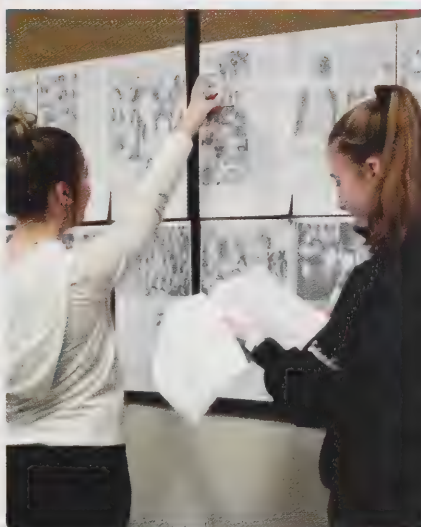

Sabrina Patrizio and Cindy Yao review a photograph they took moments before. Jaspreet Badwal crosses more names off of our master list, to make sure everyone is included in the book.

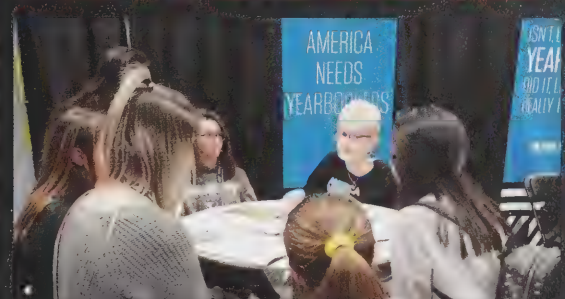

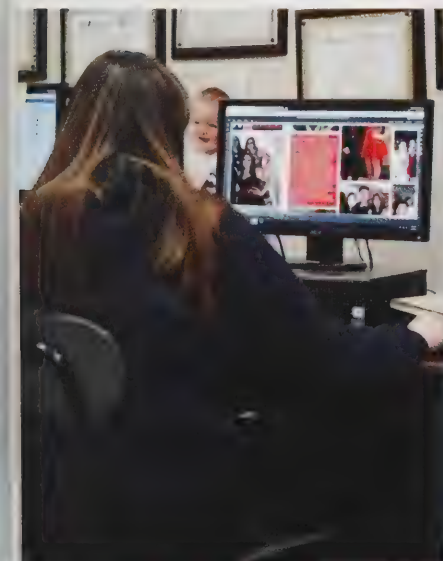

Molly Quigley writes for the club section while Jessie Guiendon works on the winter sports section, with the Yearbook Hall of Fame (Obama and John Mulaney)

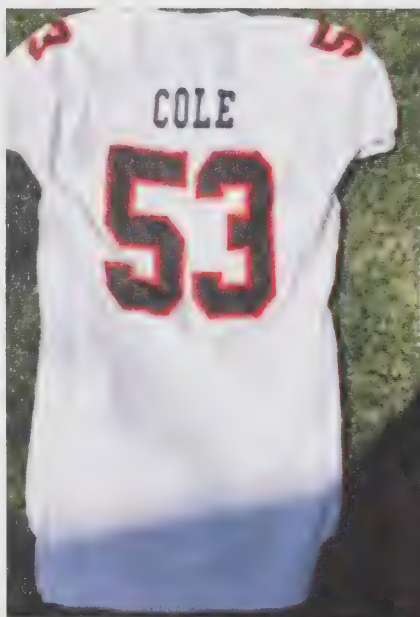

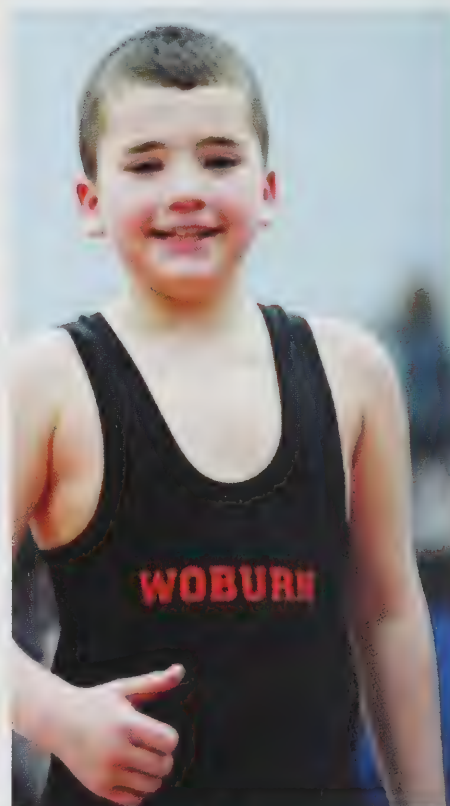

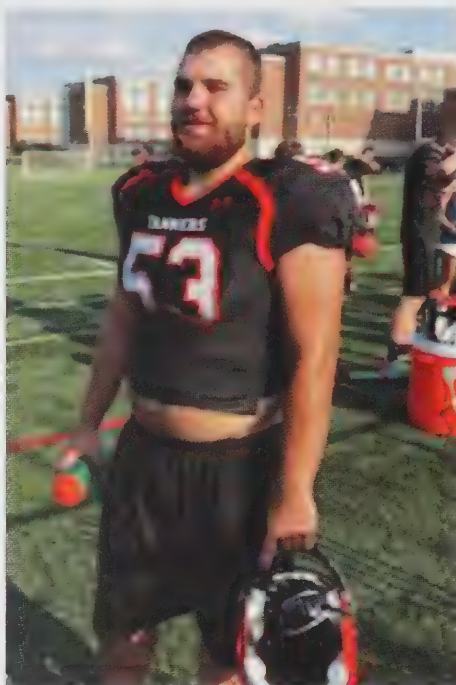

Assignment rundown: Erin Gabriel was the caption writer, Cindy Yao and Sabrina Patrizio were final editors and designers, Orlagh Skafas was the sports page guru, Jessie Guiendon was a great page editor, Molly Quigley was a main story writer and Jaspreet Badwal assisted with page editing. Together we all came together with unique views and talents to publish the best book possible. We completed this tremendous publication under the guidance of advisers, Mrs. Thifault, Mrs. Getherall and our Rep. Susan Happel.

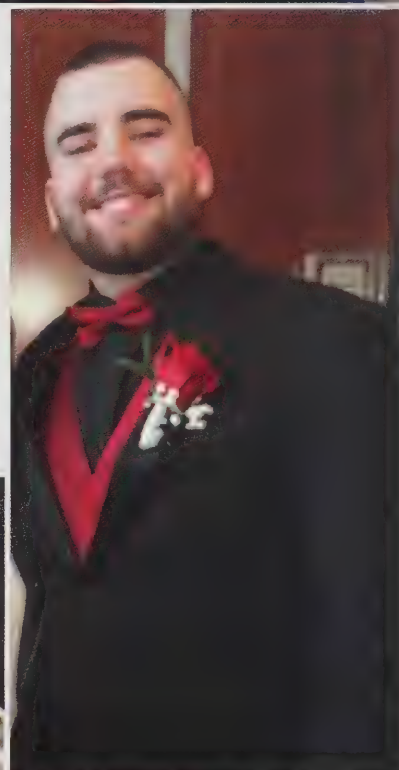

Mrs. Getherall and Mrs. Thifault double check our designs and that our deadlines will be met. Orlagh Skafas and Jessie Guiendon review the people who appear on the classroom pages. Erin Gabriel works on the caption writing for the Holiday Dance spread.

Over the course of the Chicago trip, we learned the importance of teamwork, design and writing. Not only did we take diligent notes at seminars, we brought Molly to the first ever UNOs, danced with Jaspreet on the crosswalks, vlogged with Orlagh in the city, praised Cindy for her photography skills, watched Sabrina marvel first trip to the city and rushed Erin to the American Girl Doll store. Thank you Ms. McMahon for attending our conference with us!

It seems like only yesterday you were a baby in our arms, and now you're graduating High School. You have grown into a beautiful, hard working, trustworthy and compassionate young lady... with an incredibly infectious smile.

It amazes us to watch you juggle work, dance, lead singer at church, school work, and producing your own EP, while trying to fit in a social life. We are extremely proud of the way you seem to do it all so effortlessly. You are without a doubt one of the most self-motivated, resilient people that we know.

There will always be challenges, obstacles, and less than perfect conditions, but keep reaching for the stars Nicole, there's nothing you can't achieve!

We are so very proud of you! Happy Graduation! We Love You!

Malia Lawler

Malia,

From the day you were born, you have added us an immeasurable amount of joy, laughter, and pride to all of our lives. I can't believe we are here already - at the beginning of your new journey in life. We will hold the days of countless bedtime stories, hearing "Sissa" A MILLION TIMES, Friday night dance-offs, weekend karaoke battles, cookie bake-a-thons, and nature walks close to us in our hearts. Of course it wasn't ALL ponies and rainbows... but those moments in between have some value too, as they build character. Remember - a diamond is just a chunk of coal that did really well under pressure - I hope life delivers everything you wish for an so much more you ever even dreamed of!

Always remember you are braver than you believe, stronger than you seem, smarter than you think, and loved more than you know.

Congratulations to the 2019 yearbook staff
We are so PROUD of all of you and all of the hard work that you have put into designing these beautiful pages of this book.
We wish you the best as you begin a new adventure in life.

We are always here for you
